Children at Risk: Evidence

NATIONAL ALLIANCE

FOR DRUG ENDANGERED CHILDREN Rescue. Defend. Shelter. Support

Which professionals can look for signs and evidence of risks to children?

Every professional who comes in contact with children and/or parents/caretakers has the opportunity to identify risks to children. This would include the obvious: child welfare, law enforcement, medical, teachers/educators, prevention and treatment professionals, and fire/ems. But it can also include the not so obvious: code enforcement, camp counselors, housing authorities, utility workers, nurse-family partnerships, and others.

None of these professionals are likely to observe all of the signs and evidence of risks to children, but each of these professionals may have the opportunity to provide a critical piece of the picture of a child that could result in an intervention.

Why is it critical that professionals understand and identify risks to children?

- To be able to report to appropriate agencies (i.e. Child Welfare, Law Enforcement)
- To allow for earlier identification, intervention, and services for drug endangered children
- To increase information and evidence for other professionals in order to help drug endangered children
- To enhance investigations and cases of all disciplines
- To enhance the capacity of each agency to better serve children
- To increase the likelihood of breaking the multigenerational cycles of abuse and neglect and substance abuse

What can professionals look for?

- 1. Signs of children
- 2. Indicators of increased risk of abuse or neglect child (e.g. belt marks, linear marks, bruising on or
