FACILITIES AND SERVICES

A GUIDE FOR SELECTING A FACILITY

1. Before you visit a facility, prepare a list of questions. Don't be concerned about requesting answers or asking for information; it simply shows you want the best for a friend or loved one. Write down the staff answers during interviews; this will give you a record of what was said and allow you to compare information from different programs or facilities.
2. There are many brain injury rehabilitation facilities and many have their own specialties. If your loved one has physical problems such as difficulty walking or balance issues, look for a facility with a strong physical therapy program. If your loved one is experiencing behavioral problems, a facility with a neurobehavioral program may suit your needs.
3. Try to obtain the names of at least three facilities to visit and compare for your family member.
4. Determine if the program team is experienced specifically in brain injury. A well-established rehabilitation program will have staff with many years of experience and expertise in brain injury. Specialized staff may also use more innovative treatment techniques and be more sensitive to the needs of patients and their families. Look for a team approach to planning and treatment.
5. Ask if the facility is accredited by a nationally recognized accrediting body such as the Commission on Accreditation of Rehabilitation Facilities (CARF). The Joint Commission is an independent organization that sets the highest quality control standards for healthcare. Rehab programs are not required to obtain accreditation. Those who request to be reviewed for accreditation demonstrate a strong commitment to quality.
6. Find out how much therapy is offered and how often. Facilities vary widely in their service provision.
7. Location should be just one of the many factors families consider when selecting a rehabilitation program. If a nearby program is not familiar with traumatic brain injury, it may be advantageous to travel further to ensure an appropriate program.
8. Ask for referrals to families of individuals who have participated in the program within the past year. Ask the families what they looked for in the program, what they were told prior to admission, their opinion of the program and what they would do differently.
9. Tour the facilities. Look for a clean environment with caring staff and adequate space for therapy. Determine that staff and survivors know where and when a person is supposed to be at all times. Look for a system that lets new or temporary staff become familiar with the survivor's program and needs.
10. Your final decision should be determined by your own opinions. This will continue to be the most important criteria in the long-term care of your loved one.

ACCREDITATIONS

National Accreditation Commissions, such as those mentioned below, are paid by facilities to visit their location and conduct an outside evaluation of services. The evaluation is conducted by experts in the appropriate specialty areas who apply very strict standards of care to the evaluation process. If a facility meets the standards, the agency will accredit the facility for a period of one to three years and facilities may then notify the public they have met these very strict standards. Accreditations used in this guide are:

TJC:	The Joint Commission
CARF:	Commission on Accreditation of Rehabilitation Facilities CARF in General Rehabilitation CARF in Comprehensive Inpatient Rehabilitation
CARF-BI	CARF in Brain Injury
CORF	Comprehensive Outpatient Rehabilitation Facility
