SECTION I
Alignment to Shifts
Materials must meet 100% of the indicators in Section I.
The instructional shifts are key to understanding the increased rigor of the standards. They reflect the skills and knowledge students need to be successful in the postsecondary or workforce arena. In an English language arts course, students should experience: building knowledge through content-rich literary and informational text; regular practice with complex text and its academic vocabulary; and reading and writing grounded in evidence from both literary and informational text.
Knowledge: Materials are specifically chosen to build knowledge through content-rich literary and informational texts.	Reviewer	Meets Expectations	Evidence/Notes	Revised or Referenced?	Publisher Comments	Re-Review?

	61	Yes	This indicator is technically met because all Embedded Assessments, (two for each unit), include other literacy skills aside from writing; however, the major focus of each EA is construction. Ancillary materials allow for multiple-choice, teacher-created assessments for reading comprehension & other standards-based skills, but those were not observed. A suggestion to improve the opportunities for more reading-based skill demonstrations would be to include a greater variety of formats for culminating assessments, including multiple-choice, multiple-select, etc.

SECTION II

Alignment to Tennessee English Language Arts Standards

Materials must meet at least 90% of indicators in Section II.

The instructional materials represent alignment with the Tennessee English Language Arts Standards and explicitly focus teaching and learning on the grade-level standards, at the rigor necessary for students to reach mastery. Tennessee expects the full breadth and depth of the standards to be taught in an integrated and spiraled manner throughout the school year.

SECTION III
High-Quality Instruction: Unit Design, Text Sets, Questions, and Tasks
Materials meet at least 80% of indicators in Section III.
Standards are taught in an integrated fashion to support students in developing proficiency as readers and writers as they make meaning of texts through reading, writing, speaking and listening. Instructional decisions for standards instruction centers on the texts that have been selected to strategically build students' knowledge, and the standards are spiraled throughout the year to promote continued practice and application with ever increasing text complexity.

h. Materials include multiple opportunities for students to engage in repeated reads of a text with varying purposes for each reading (i.e., close reading).	37	Yes	No. This indicator is not met. While the activities do ask for students to revisit the text in order to answer questions (e.g. p25, question 4), this indicator asks students to read in a variety of settings: whole, small, and independent, and to engage in re-reads of the text. Students should also know the purpose of why they are rereading a text, and have opportunities to select passages necessary for rereading due to literary merit. One suggestion for improvement is to explicitly state to the student why they are rereading a text. Also, students could engage with their peers to do a deeper reading and therefore, provide a deeper analysis of the text. For example, on page 229 of the student edition, the activity could have students break into pairs to reread Proctor's and Elizabeth's lines in scene 2 of The Crucible in order to determine what type of gestures, facial expressions, and vocal delivery they would use for each of the two characters. The reread is tied to revisiting the text in order to pair the physical performance with the mood/tone of the scene.

SECTION IV: Additional Components
These components are areas that districts consider when making purchasing decisions to meet the unique needs of their districts. Although these additional components do not prevent publishers from being on the state-approved adoption list, they do provide districts with additional information to use during their decision-making process.

	42	Yes	0
	110	Yes	0
	61	No	The indicator is not met. Although the close reading techniques are excellent, there is no annotation model of a text present. The only listed annotations on the passages are vocabulary boxes, author information, captions, and questions. The note boxes in the margins are well-done, but there are no annotation models for the passages themselves - no master example of marking up a text. Without showing a student what the text-based annotations look like before directing them to make annotations, it is difficult to gage success. A suggestion for improvement would be to add a page with extensive annotations on a mentor text excerpt to show what it looks like to dig in, generate questions as you read, model the actual think aloud, & text-marking, etc.

d. When appropriate, topics and/or enduring understandings are connected to grade-level content from other Tennessee Academic Standards (e.g., science, social studies, health, and fine arts). Standards connections are clearly documented.	37	Yes	Yes. While the English standards are readily identifiable, there are several lessons where cross-curricular instruction is evident; however, the standards for those particular subjects are not included despite the activity addressing other subjects. For example, the activity, "Gaining Perspectives", fulfills History standards for the state of TN; however, the text does not explicitly state which History standards. One suggestion is to add the cross-curricular standards where applicable.

e. Lessons include teacher think-alouds to model appropriate application of literacy skills.	37	Yes	0
	42	No	Some examples of "think alouds are provided, but teacher "think aloud" models/examples are not included each time a "think aloud" is mentioned in teacher instructions. A suggested revision would be to expand teacher instructions to included models of the think alouds such as on page 151.
	40	Yes	0

	61	Yes	This indicator is met because the think alouds are given practice in the teacher-facing materials that ask for a modeled process for the desired demonstration of skill. However, one note of improvement would be to give a more thorough script for beginning think alouds in earlier units for teachers who need that support structure (to make sure they are modeling correctly). There is little direct instruction to go off of to create self-driven content.
f. Teacher-facing materials provide guidance to support teachers in identifying student misconceptions that may prevent student mastery of the Tennessee English Language Arts Standards.	37	Yes	0
	42	No	Possible student misconceptions are not identified in most lessons. Therefore, guidance to support teachers in identifying and addressing these misconceptions are not addressed.
